A Dane County Circuit judge has rejected several motions made by an attorney for five University of Wisconsin-Madison students arrested while protesting CIA recruitment on campus last fall.

Defense attorney David Sparer asked prosecutors to produce all police reports, photographs and recorded transmissions among police agencies, including the FBI and CIA, occurring on October 22, 23 and 24, 1985.

He also sought names of all CIA interviewees, all police officers and all UW faculty members in the Engineering Building during the protest.

Judge George Northrup allowed the defense to view police videotapes Monday, but denied Sparer's other motions, calling them a fishing expedition.

Sparer said police had a history of disrupting and infiltrating student activists and he wanted tapes and documents to prove police had a preconceived plan to disrupt the protest.
